

From Development Center to Community Employment

"I am really excited to be going to Hy-Vee and hope that it works out so I can continue working there," said VODEC consumer Derek Taylor. Derek is currently working with a VODEC Community Employment Specialist preparing for his workplace assessment with Hy-Vee.

Workplace assessments are crucial to determining the best place for a person with an intellectual or developmental disability, like Derek, to work. VODEC's Community Employment Specialists work alongside community employers and Vocational Rehabilitation to perform these assessments for persons with disabilities. Consumers work at a local business so they can be observed in a community setting for the assessment. They get a list of job tasks to complete and the Employment Specialist is there to observe the work they do and see how they handle situations and communicate with coworkers, guests, and supervisors. After the initial assessment the Employment Specialist will then take their observations and place that into a report. From the report, the Community Employment staff conclude if they feel Derek is ready for Community Employment, based on his strengths and which employability skills he can continue to develop. "Some of the main goals for an assessment is to get the individual involved and see if that type of job is something they would like to do permanently, assess the individuals strengths and weaknesses, and try to place them in a community job," said Community Employment Supervisor Danielle Nordby.

While the ultimate goal for these assessments is community employment they also offer many other opportunities for the consumers to practice workplace, social and problem-solving skills.

From the Desk of CEO Steve Hodapp

To any Consumer:

Dear _____,

So you may have heard of “taking a vacation”. What do you think it means? No doubt you have an idea and that idea may be different from someone else’s. That’s OK because it’s your idea.

What may be consistent between your idea of vacation and someone else’s idea is the departure from work. That is to say, time off. Time off is a good thing.

The opportunity to recharge may be another common idea. For many people vacation provides a way to get re-energized by seeing and doing things they don’t do everyday. That is kind of exciting.

Another idea in common may be that a vacation involves going somewhere. I have to say not always. Sometimes a stay-cation can accomplish the objectives of a vacation.

If you can’t get away then you have to punt by getting creative. This could involve sleeping in (remember, no reporting to work on vacation). You might try a different restaurant or even just a different meal at a favorite cafe. Go to a movie in the afternoon. Like to just lounge around? This is your chance!

But one thing we all have in common is that after vacation we return to work feeling like we have a smile inside. It gives us something to visit with our friends about. And sometimes we are just glad to be back with our friends. Do you feel that way?

So regardless of the time off you get (even weekends!), enjoy it. Do something special. Make your insides smile. And I want to hear all about it.

Cares celebrates Father’s Day with party

VODEC’s Iowa Cares program celebrated Father’s Day in June with a luncheon and games. Father’s who attended were given gifts, made crafts, and played a few games with their family members. “It was great to meet and speak with all of Janelle’s friends,” said VODEC consumer Janelle Schwaninger’s father. Amanda Bible was thrilled that her father came and she introduced him to everyone. It was a great day and both the consumers and their families really enjoyed it.

Consumers who work with VODEC's Community Employment Specialists spend time working on job skills such as preparing for an interview with questions, deciding on the appropriate clothing for both the interview and the job, and determining what type of job they would like. To accomplish this, the Community Employment Specialist interviews consumers, like Derek, to discover person centered preferences such as what time of day do they prefer to work, do they have transportation, what interests them and why, what do they think their skills are and what does their team think their skills are, how are their communication skills, and anything else that the Community Employment Specialist needs to know to help find them an assessment and a permanent community job.

For Derek, who wanted to work in a comic book store or a grocery store, this process has been a valuable one. "I have really liked working with my Employment Specialist and they have helped me a lot with this process," said Taylor. This process has also been an encouraging one for Derek's family. "We have noticed Derek's self esteem has really risen. Even though this assessment is short term, Derek sees this as a shot at longterm employment. During the last few weeks, he has been letting all his friends and family know how excited he is to be given the opportunity to work at Hy-Vee," said Derek's mother Angie Richardson about his newest accomplishments.

Ride for Full Potential reaches midway point

The Ride for Full Potential has reached the midway point of the trip traveling through Newton, KS. Ron, his son Matt, and their friend Terry have been riding from Virginia to Oregon to raise awareness for persons with intellectual disabilities and also to help raise money for VODEC's teaching kitchen. They have traveled through Virginia, into Kentucky and Illinois and then into Missouri. Newton, Kansas is the midway point across the nation and their trip will end up in Astoria, Oregon in August. Follow their progress at www.rondickinson.org and donate to VODEC for the teaching kitchen at www.razoo.com/ride-for-full-potential.

Blackjack Run raises money for VODEC Programs

“It was a windy day but everyone had a great time,” said Iowa Operations Director Mark Stromer of the Blackjack run that took close to 100 people through Southwest Iowa on June 14th. The day started at the American Legion Post 2 in Council Bluffs with a breakfast provided by the Legion Auxiliary in which all the donations from the breakfast also went to VODEC. After breakfast and registration, riders traveled through the Southwest Iowa towns of Oakland, Griswold, Emerson and Mineola.

Over $2,000 was raised in total and a portion of that will be used for the Iowa and Nebraska Residential programs to provide activities for consumers in services. “I had a great time. It was a lot of fun,” said consumer Norma Hammers of the days events.

Residential Programs stay busy with activities

Between the Iowa program and the Nebraska program, VODEC serves 160 consumers in either hourly services or in a group home setting with 24-hour staff on hand. With each consumer usually wanting to do something different, it is up to a committee of staff and consumers to decide on some of the summer activities that everyone can attend. In the past both programs have made day trips to Adventureland and Worlds of Fun, gone swimming, held BBQ's at local parks, and many other activities and this summer is no different. Consumers will once again be able to travel to venues to enjoy the weather and the fun they have to offer.
